Getting in trouble online

- 4 Read the following statements, and mark "○" if correct, or "×" if incorrect.

(5pts x 4 = 20pts)

① Even if you don't post it yourself, spreading fake news means helping the person who posted it.

② My friend asked if they could post our photo on social media. But I refused because it showed my face and school uniform.

③ Passwords are hard to remember, and even worse if I forget them, so I always use the same password.

④ When I have problems online, I should handle them myself without telling my parents or teachers because it is my problem.

Below are examples of photos you should NOT post online or send to people you don't know. Explain why they may be dangerous.

(10pts x 3 = 30pts)

Embarrassing
photos like naked
photos or showing
too much skin

Example: They can be used to threaten you.

Photos of your house
key

Example: Someone could make a copy of your key.

Photos of your home or neighborhood

Example: Your address
could be identified.

There are many other photos that can be dangerous to share.

Check the illustrations
for hints!

Can you think of other dangerous photos? Write your ideas below

Ex: name tags (reveals your name/school), someone's face (violates portrait rights), copyrighted works like manga (copyright violation), any personal information about you or others.

To Parents and Guardians

While the internet has become an important part of children's lives, it also has serious dangers, such as being kidnapped by someone they met online, or being threatened into sending sensitive photos that contain nudity.

Additionally, it is not uncommon for to become the attacker themselves by cyber-bullying their friends, posting inappropriate behaviors online that violates the law, or posting false information on social media.

For children to use the internet safely and securely without getting caught up in these troubles, it is important for us adults to understand the internet correctly and watch over them.

Why not take this opportunity to discuss with your children once again about "how to use the internet safely," and considering your child's development and your family's circumstances, create "Family Rules" together?

Write down what you discussed with your family
